Editorial
3 A note from the editor

Classroom research
4 7 principles of practitioner research
Jonathan Ryan describes the ideal context for embarking on classroom research.

6 Action research in the English language classroom
Thu Tran explains why action research is beneficial for teacher professional growth.

11 CLILing me softly
Jacqueline Douglas experiments with content based teaching.

14 Classroom research: rethink testing
Miranda Hamilton describes using scaffolding assessment with her low-level learners.

17 Learner-generated material – is it worth the effort?
Alison Crooks investigates the benefits of learners creating their own exam preparation materials.

20 Effective strategies for managing young learners in class
Adrienne Waider describes her research into young learner behaviour.

24 Classroom research as a way of improving your courses
Mark Lawrence describes how he combines student feedback with his own reflections to develop his courses.

27 Facilitating reflective and collaborative learning in EAP
Anthea Foster and Dilani Gedera investigate the use of ePortfolios.

30 Classroom research as a part of teacher-trainer development
Alison Shepherd describes using Lesson Study to improve teacher training practice.

32 English medium instruction: a case study of lecturers’ beliefs and practices
Roger Barnard and Zuwati Hasim observe classroom practice in a Malaysian university.

35 Feedback: what is it and who is it for?
Kath Robb considers learner preferences in terms of feedback.

37 Action research: improving attitudes to writing in class
Cassandra O’Sullivan Sachar describes a way to improve learners’ writing.

40 ‘Fifty Shades of Grey’ again?
Françoise Thomas and Guy Walker argue that it is time teachers began to focus on the ‘object aspect’ of a document.

43 Can translation improve EFL students’ grammatical accuracy?
Carol Ebert-Hübner and Clare Maas report on their research into this area.

Professional development
46 Cooperation and collaboration
In the first of two articles, Andrew Boon looks at these two important aspects of professional development.

51 Reflective spaces for language teachers
Daniel Xerri discusses the importance of reflection and where it can be done.

Young learners
53 Music in lessons
Solomon Au Yeung reflects on how songs can help the language learning process.

Approaches
55 Grammar instruction and the communicative approach – an unlikely pairing?
Bijana Naumoska-Sarukinska offers her opinions on which approaches work best for her.

EAP
58 Empowering learners through critical pedagogy
Ekaterina Arshavskaya describes the ideas of applying the ideas of critical pedagogy.

60 Academic writing: a Chinese perspective
Christopher Redmond highlights some issues faced by some of his first-year students.

Using technology
63 A modern take on an ancient art
Flora Debra Floris and Willy A. Reinardy describe how students can use technology to help tell stories.

67 Cisco Webex Meeting Center: a window for e-learning
Daniel Costa describes one of the many global online teaching platforms.

In my opinion
70 Integrating gender and sexual diversity in the English language classroom
Simon Dunton explores the reasons for LGBT topic-inclusion in English language learning.

Teacher training
73 Horses for courses
Karin Krummenacher advocates differentiation and flexibility on initial teacher training courses.

In my opinion
76 Who’s afraid of transparent teaching?
Stephen Reilly discusses ways of making lesson observation more interesting and useful.

Reviews
79 Reviews
Roger Gower
A book I’ve used
80 In Company 3.0 Logistics
Brian Brennan
81 Heibing Readers (Classics)
Neil McBeath
82 Mobile Learning
Wayne Rimmer
84 Penny Ur’s 100 Teaching Tips
Clare Henderson

Background books
85 International Perspectives on ELT
Roger Barnard

87 Summary of books reviewed
88 What’s new